Doll's Eye

Actaea pachypoda

Doll's Eye berries are highly poisonous to humans & animals (not birds)

I certainly am a very powerful plant. I'll tell you why in a moment. One of my most important jobs is to keep an eye on the forest. Because I have lots of eyes, this is easy for me. Except when my eyes (actually berries) fall off in late fall!

As winter approaches I begin to die back and move all my energy into my roots and go to sleep for the winter. I become invisible, as all my leaves, berries, and stems dry up and fall off when it goes below freezing.

I have a cousin whose leaves and flowers also look like mine, but he has berries that turn dark red in the fall.

A shade-loving plant, Doll's Eye has beautiful spring flowers.

Doll's Eye is an attractive woodland wildflower.
